MOJAVE DESERT SCoured

Authorities Certain Storm Forced Down Ship

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 28.—The manager of the Santa Paula airport today sighted the wreckage of the missing United Air Line plane on a Mountain side about 35 miles north of here.

He reported to United Air Line officials here that he believed all of the nine passengers and three members aboard had been killed in the crash.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 28.—(UP)—Fear for the safety of 12 persons aboard a United Air Lines liner that was due here at 7:30 p. m. PST last night, increased today. The plane was down, but whether it crashed in a storm that whipped across the state, or made a safe emergency landing was unknown.

A report that a blinding flash disabled power lines near Simi, 75 miles north of here, about 8 p. m. was investigated on the theory it might have been the big Boeing crashing.

The flash was reported by A. Harrington, a rancher. He telephoned the sheriff's office at Ventura, a few miles away. The telephone operator at Simi verified the fact that he telephoned her shortly after 8 o'clock last night and inquired if there had been a power failure.

House Interior Lighted

The flash, Harrington said, lighted up the interior of his house and then the lights went out. He said he did not hear a crash or explosion.

Harrington's flash, however, came an hour and 45 minutes before Ed Blom, pilot of the big transport, reported his position as (Continued on Page Eight)

His Illness Causes Concern

WHILE Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., was said not to be in serious condition, concern was felt over his failure to recover as rapidly as had been hoped. Young Roosevelt, son of the president, recently underwent an operation in a Boston hospital for a sinus infection. The youth, a student at Harvard, where he rows on the crew, is shown above walking, rowing and with his fiancée, Ethel duPont.

NAZI STEAMERS AWAIT ACTION BY LOYALISTS

HENDAYE, French - Spanish Frontier, Dec. 28.—(UP)—German cruisers and destroyers steamed along the horizon off Bilbao, Spain, today awaiting developments in the German government's demand for release of a German steamship which was seized off the port last week.

The presence of the warships was regarded merely as a demonstration while the government considered action, but it increased tension along the bay of Biscay coast and, dispatches said, caused Basque loyalists of Bilbao, Santander and Gijon to make ready for a defense in event that Germany took real action.

It was understood that the Madrid government telegraphed Basque provinces authorities at Bilbao, asking a full report on the seizure of the ship, the Palos, and its cargo.

PETERS CLAIMS CREAGER BROKE CROP CONTRACT

Alleged violation of a farm lease resulted in a suit being filed in common pleas court Saturday by Paul Peters against John Creager, both of Harrison township.

The petition says Peters leased part of his farm on a crop-share basis to Creager in September, 1935, and Creager failed to carry out provisions of the agreement. Peters asks $130.30 for labor in taking care of a crop, and $200 damages. An order restraining Creager from removing fodder or selling the corn was allowed by Judge J. W. Adkins.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28.—(UP)—Morris Fenyes, 34, beamed proudly as his 11-year-old daughter, Edith, spelled correctly "scintillating" and all the other hard words in a $5 contest. It began to look as if Edith would win. The announcer called out "silhouette." Edith began, "S-I-L-I-E." The announcer waved her aside. Fenyes half rose from his chair, clutched his side and fell dead.

FOWLER FACES TERM IN PRISON AT MANSFIELD

He was indicted for taking a billfold and $1 in silver from Lloyd Moyer, of Bremen, last Oct. 23. The theft took place on the Ringgold pike.

ARMY TO MOVE COMPANY C TO NORTHERN CITY

Marx Informs Hunsicker of Order Sent Him From Washington

"CITY NOT TO SUFFER"

Lima or Cleveland to Get Motor Transport

Clark Hunsicker, Pickaway county's representative in the general assembly, announced Monday after a conference with Adjutant General Emil Marx that Company C of the 112th Quartermaster regiment will be transferred from Circleville to either Lima or Cleveland in the near future.

Marx told Mr. Hunsicker orders had come from army headquarters in Washington D. C. to remove the motor transport unit to a city in northern Ohio because of the frequent need for the big trucks in that part of the state.

City Not to Suffer

While the move is necessary, Marx informed the representative that Circleville "would not suffer" by the action, because either another medical outfit or an artillery unit will be sent to Circleville. "There will be no loss in manpower," Marx declared.

Mr. Hunsicker was informed of the rumor last week, and said he would contact the adjutant general Monday, in an effort to do everything possible to keep the company in Circleville. "There are 15 trucks now in charge of Company C. The quota is 32."

Petitions have been placed in the hands of many civic and fraternal organizations against removal of the unit.

Formed 15 Years Ago

The company was organized in 1921 and carried the name "motor transport" until a year ago when a reorganization placed the outfit in the quartermaster division.

Harbage Suit Against Legislators on Trial

COLUMBUS, Dec. 28.—(UP)—The effect of Arnett Harbage, Madison county farmer and taxpayer, to prevent state representatives from collecting $21,000 in mileage fees was to be climaxed in common pleas court here today when the suit was heard by Judge Charles Leach.

The fees the representatives seek are for mythical trips to Columbus from July 8 to Dec. 15 when the legislature was not in session.

Harbage seeks to restrain State Auditor Joseph Tracy from making the payments.

Gilbert Bettman, Cincinnati, and Mrs. Agnes Dickinson, Columbus, were to present Harbage's case. Bettman said he might amend the suit to recover $5,000 which state senators collected for similar "trips."

Attorney General John W. Bricker termed the action of the legislators "indefensible" and declined to defend them.

POLICE SEARCH FOR DEVICE USED TO WIN DAMAGES

CHICAGO, Dec. 28.—(UP)—Police were busy searching today for a "bruising machine," handy device used by ambulance chasers to inflict painless bruises on fake claimants.

The machine, allegedly used by a ring of lawyers, grafting doctors and crooked undertakers, was brought to light in the confession of George L. West, 55, made last night to the state's attorney.

The good-natured, rotund West said he would be glad to produce the machine but it had been loaned to a doctor connected with the ring who is busy fixing up a patient with nice fresh bruises for a fake damage claim this week.

West's confession came on the eve of an investigation by the grand jury into the ambulance chasing racket, just when prosecutors feared they lacked sufficient evidence to procure indictments. West was traced and arrested through payment of protection money by lawyers involved.

F. D. R. IS READY TO SAY INCOME SETS NEW MARK

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—(UP)—President Roosevelt is about ready to report to the nation that the government is enjoying its biggest income year since 1920.

Mr. Roosevelt expects income for the current 1937 fiscal year to be about $5,665,000,000. That is $1,000,000,000 more revenue than the Hoover administration collected in the fiscal years 1932 and 1933 together.

But there will be another deficit for the current fiscal year, and so far there has been no official assurance that federal receipts will cover all expenditures in the new fiscal year (1938) which will begin next July 1.

The president's budget message will be sent to congress next week. It will contain final figures for the 1936 fiscal year, which ended last June 30. It will contain revised estimates of the outlook for the current fiscal year and it will estimate receipts and expenditures for the next.

Rough Masked Man Cows Three Children in Mansion Overlooking Puget Sound, Near Home of Weyerhaeuser Youngster

AMOUNT DEMANDED NOT DISCLOSED

Ravines, Wooded Sections Provide Hideout For Kidnap and Youthful Victim

WASHINGTON, Dec. 28.—(UP)—J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the nation's G-men, announced today that the entire facilities of the federal bureau of investigation had been thrown into the hunt for the kidnaper of 10-year-old Charles Mattson of Tacoma, Wash.

TACOMA, Wash., Dec. 28.—(UP)—A kidnaper who broke into the fashionable Puget Sound home of Dr. W. W. Mattson last night and abducted his 10-year-old son, Charles, today was the object of a manhunt that extended to the islands of the sound the hills and rough country stretching in every direction from Tacoma.

Police, federal agents and special deputies were mobilized to hunt down the masked man.

Absolute secrecy was ordered for every person engaged in the hunt. Recalling that too much talking apparently delayed the release of young George Hunt Weyerhaeuser, Harold Bird, police chief, clamped down on all information. The FBI agents were as secretive as G-men always are.

Ransom Figure Varies

It was impossible to learn even the exact amount of ransom demanded. The figure varied from $16,000 to $28,000 and Chief Bird would not even say which was the correct amount. Dr. Mattson and his wife, who were away when Charles was kidnaped, denied themselves to interviewers. Their two other children, William, Jr., and Muriel, also were kept in seclusion. Muriel and William were in the room with Charles when the masked man broke in.

Smashing out a glass window with the butt of a revolver the man reached through and unlocked a door. He left a ransom note, picked out Charles as the three cowed against the wall, and backed out. Then he ran to a parked car and drove away. The sound is a few blocks from the Mattson home. Officers did not overlook the possibility the abductor might have escaped by water. His car was not found, however.

If the man made any threats of officers refused to reveal them. How or where ransom is to be paid was not divulged. Whether the child's life was threatened was not known. Officers, however, viewed the ugly manner in which the man smashed his way into the house and displayed his gun to cow three children, as indicative of a mean temper.

INDOOR GARDEN STANDS ABUSE, BUT NEEDS CARE

COLUMBUS, Dec. 28 — Some plants are tough and that is one reason why most homes have a few plants because the lack of care given the indoor garden is fatal to all except the most hardy specimens, according to Victor H. Ries, specialist in floriculture, Ohio State University.

Number one spot in the cast is given to sansevieria which also has an alias, bow string hemp. Another member of this same gang is the Laurenti variety of the plant. The first member has erect, leathery, sword-like leaves which are striped with light colored bands. The Laurenti variety has leaves with cream colored margins.

Devil's ivy, philodendron, will grow in soil or water in summer or winter and it can carry on in the dark if there is no sunny spot available. This plant is tougher than English ivy. It can be forced to branch out by pricking out the terminal buds of the downward growing shoots.

A newcomer in the list of hardy plants is the Japanese grape, which is satisfied with either sun or shade. It grows either in soil or water, and is more resistant to inattention than English ivy. The old-fashioned aspidistra belongs in the list of plants that will survive a lot of abuse.

Another newcomer, nepenthes, is a vine with arrow-shaped leaves. It will grow indoors with a minimum of attention. The Jade plant will survive in a sunny window even though the owner forgets to water it occasionally. The peperomia, which resembles a dwarf rubber plant is equally hardy.

Mr. Ries lists davalia bullata as the toughest fern. English ivy grows either in soil or water and must be classed along with other plants which thrive under adverse conditions. Most florists can supply any of the plants named and selections should be made from the list by those persons who like plants but do not remember to care for them regularly.

Although these plants need very little nursing, they grow better if given some attention. Mr. Ries says regular watering every day is one of the most important factors in keeping plants healthy. It is better to supply small amounts regularly than to permit plants to become thirsty and then drench them with too much water. One ounce of ammonium sulphate dissolved in two gallons of water used to water the plants once a month will renew the food supply.

U. S. FORESEES POSTAL RECORD IN STAMP SALE

WASHINGTON (UP) — Booming business has the presses in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing rolling day and night to meet demand for stamps and new currency.

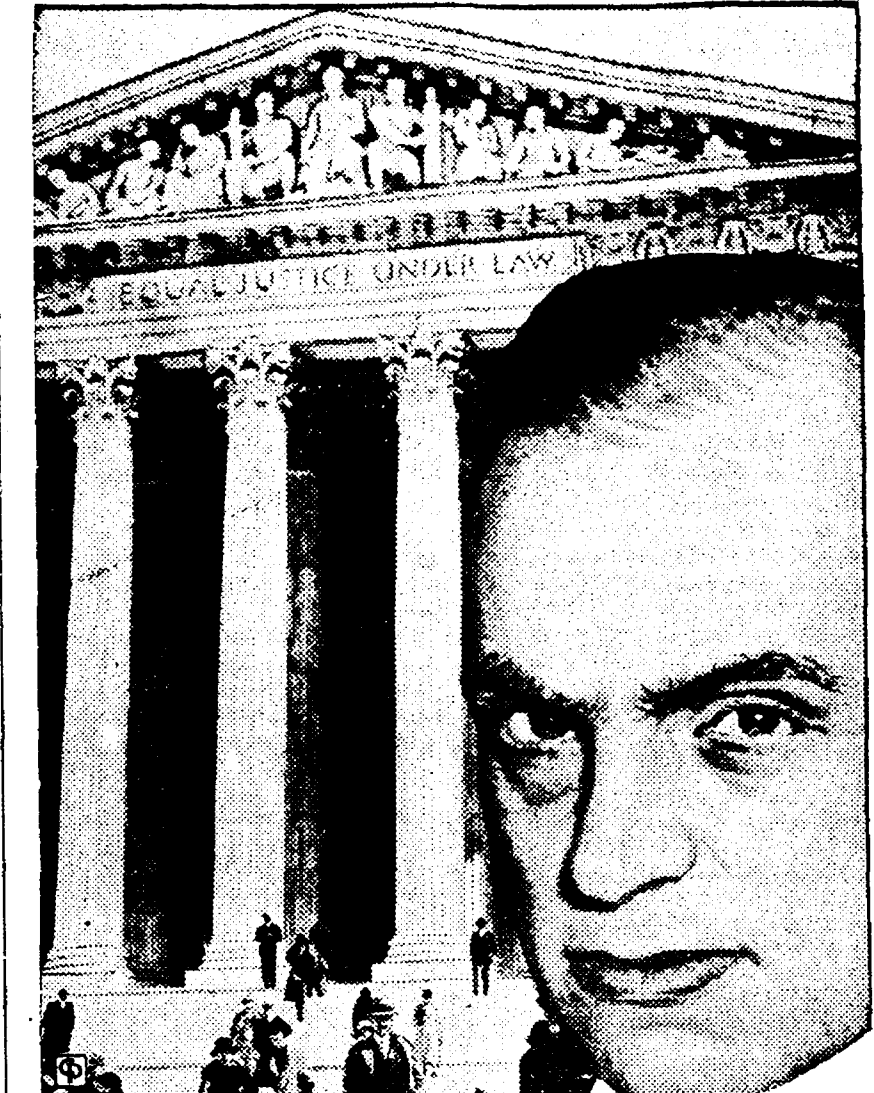

Demand for 2 and 3-cent stamps, according to postal officials is higher than at any time since start of the depression. So far in the fiscal year demand for these stamps is 20 per cent over the previous fiscal year.

Post office revenues, an official said, bids to break the all-time record of $750,000,000, set in 1930.

At the bureau of engraving, it was revealed that from July 1 to Nov. 30 a daily average of 59,000,000 postage stamps were printed,

Young Chairman of Sec In Line for Supreme Court At Least So Capital Hears

James M. Landis, Only 37, Law Professor Who Became "Czar" Ruling Wall Street, Has Had Distinctive Career

James M. Landis, chairman of the Securities Exchange Commission, has been mentioned for the U. S. supreme court whose new home is shown above.

WASHINGTON, — A whisper has named James McCauley Landis, chairman of the Securities and Exchange commission, as a possibility for a place on the U. S. supreme court bench.

Now a Washington whisper is as intangible as a breeze.

Yet if this particular whisper is intangible, the individual mentioned is as ponderable as snow-capped Fujiyama, in whose shadow he was born Sept. 25, 1899.

A Washington woman, wife of a New Deal official, accustomed to evaluate men, has described Landis as the "man of two faces", but a "two-faced man" by no means.

Transformation

That is to say, when Landis acts in his official capacity, he broods.

His smoky, unblinking, blue eyes miss nothing; his long jaw set and ready. His head is a little bowed, listening and weighing.

But when he laughs, it's a different face; jovial and ingenuous. His friends say he plays a nifty game of bridge and can read his hand and judge his chances, with the one-eyed Jack wild.

Other friends say he's a wild-eyed golf player, who should use a hoe instead of a niblick.

Certain gentlemen, who have come to Washington to explain to that "kid in the S. E. C." that water and stock are as inseparable as prayers and religion, have gone home lamenting, so all the sundry could hear them, that what they needed was a pump; not a bucket.

Landis has the case-hardened type of steel brain, so far as his objective is concerned.

Full Speed Ahead

He centers his eye upon his destination and goes there—ditches, hedges, barbed wire fences and opposition notwithstanding. This would mean that he is ruthless, were it not for the fact that he considers all angles and makes up his mind to an end that is fair to all concerned.

He never overrides opposition, but he almost never fails to out-argue it.

He drives his little 1930 model car, when he can get it started, to beat blazes.

He never rides through a red light, but he goes at a terrific rate compared with 45,000,000 in 1933. The daily average of cigarette stamps was 32,000,000; for tobacco stamps 9,500,000, and for liquor stamps 4,800,000.

The daily average of new currency printing was 3,600,000 compared to 2,100,000 in 1933. A treasury official attributed the increase to more rapid circulation of money.

Two shifts are at work in the bureau of engraving and printing to keep up the stamp supply. Three shifts have been employed in producing new seamen certificates required under the Copeland safety-at-sea act. In addition, 1,000,000 posters are being printed for the Social Security Board and two shifts are working on bonds and certificates in connection with the recent treasury financing.

A Miss Mary Christmas, it has been discovered, lives near Santa Claus, Ind. If the Hoosier state isn't careful, the North Pole may soon see Indiana for plagiarism.

past the green ones. Sometimes the old can dies on his hands. Then he climbs into a big limousine and proceeds to the Securities and Exchange commission offices, at Eighteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, in befitting fashion.

His little girls, six and eight, watch him go, for they thing their daddy is a "fine guy".

Their mother was Stella Gallows McGhee, who married Landis in Woodville, Miss.

Dignified at 37

Officially, Chairman Landis presides with all the dignity of any of the black-robed justices, one of whom he may be, in the temple of justice on Capitol Hill.

And right now he is 37 and a few months old—very young for a supreme court justice.

Still, he has had some judicial experience: he was a justice of the peace back in his days at Princeton university.

He has been closer than that, however, to the supreme court of the United States.

Back in 1925 he was clerk to Justice Brandeis. He quit that job to become assistant professor of law at Harvard. In 1928 he became full professor. He came to Washington in 1933 as a member of the Federal Trade commission.

In September, 1934, he succeeded Joseph Kennedy as chairman of the S. E. C.

While he never has practiced law, in the commonly accepted meaning of the term, he has been identified with law and law making since his Princeton days. In 1931 he was a member of the Commission for Uniform Laws in Massachusetts.

Authority on Law

Landis collaborated with Professor Felix Frankfurter in 1927 in writing "The Business of the Supreme Court". Four years later he edited "Selected Readings on the Law of Contracts". In 1934 he brought out "Case Book on Labor Laws".

Not a bad record for a lad of 37, born as far away from the United States as Tokio.

As a mental diet he goes in for law, and for variety, a study of military tactics. If in the mood, he can explain why Stonewall Jackson did not come galloping into Washington after the first Bull Run battle; why J. E. B. Stewart was a bit tardy at Gettysburg.

Landis is a person who cannot lose himself in a crowd.

He doesn't force himself in. He simply is elected to play center, even though he was to light to make the team at Princeton. He had quite a record at Mercersburg, but the Tigers were too weighty for him, so he whirled in and did scouting for Old Nassau.

Enjoys Good Food

On the social side, his friends say that Landis does abominate a boiled shirt and a blaze-front vest. As for cocktails, he hates 'em.

But just give him some friends at a restaurant—one with a chef that can do tricks on the range! Not that he can be described as a gourmet. But they say he knows good cooking.

If there's anything to the rumor that he will be named to the first vacancy on the federal bench, he'll be one of the youngest justices to sit on that august woolpack—how they describe such high tribunals in England.

AUTO DESIGNED TO RUN ON AIR

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UP) — Charles Thomas Hunt, 67-year-old mechanic, says he is developing an automobile which will use air instead of gasoline and be refueled by highway jolts.

Hunt has completed the motor. It is driven by compressed air. He believes his invention will revolutionize the motor industry.

"The engineers said it couldn't be done because they didn't get it out of their books," Hunt said. "And they didn't get it out of books because it wasn't in them. But I did it, and now they'll put it in their books."

Hunt plans to make the first practical test of his invention about Dec. 15. He promises to put his first skeleton automobile powered with the air-driven motor on Springfield streets at that time.

His first car will have a light steel frame only 4 feet long, 26 inches wide, with a "skeleton" body. It will have a maximum speed, he predicts, of approximately 14 miles an hour.

Piston Less Than Inch

Hunt's motor has a tiny, five-eighths inch piston with a four and one-quarter inch stroke, and a weighted flywheel mounted on a small axle to which the piston is attached.

When Hunt turns the valve on the compressed air tank, a plunger releases half-a-pound of compressed air from the tube leading from the tank into the cylinder housing the piston. The half-pound blast of air shoves the piston down, and the flywheel, weighted with five pounds of metal on one side, turns over.

As the piston returns to the top of the cylinder, the plunger releases another blast of air automatically, forcing it down again and keeping the operation continuous.

The plunger which releases the air into the cylinder operates on the same principle as a match stuck into the valve core of an automobile.

"To Harness" Bumps

Hunt believes he can harness the car's bouncing to pump air into the tank.

To each of the four corners of the car's frame, a pump will be attached with a tube leading from it to the air tank. When the car hits a bump, the raising of the frame will raise the plunger from the pump, sucking air into it. As the frame settles back, the pump plunger will force the air into the tank, Hunt believes.

And if there aren't enough bumps and the supply of air is exhausted?

Hunt has an answer for that, too.

Refill the tank, he says, with an ordinary air hose at the filling station, or bounce the car by jumping on the running board.

Women to Play Major Part in Farm Program

COLUMBUS, Dec. 28—Members of the home economics department at Ohio State university are tempting wrathful reprisals from Big Boss Hitler by arranging a program for women during Farmers' Week, Jan. 25 to 29, that is not confined to consideration of home and children.

Plans have been made for a talk "Building for World Peace" by Russell Chase, a Cleveland attorney. Any sword swinging dictator could prove that such topics are of no concern to women. Then, Professor Howard F. Bigelow, Kalamazoo, Michigan, is scheduled to discuss, "Managing the Family Finances." How can men folks buy gun-powder and tin hats if women hold the purse strings?

In Field of Men

As a further aggravation, the women are organizing, and the Federation of Women's Clubs will have several meetings during Farmers' Week. Probably, those meetings will lead to further interference in fields which should be dominated by men. The final gesture in defiance of Hitlerism is a demonstration of the discussion method given by J. P. Schmidt, state supervisor of farmers' institutes. Showing women how to be more effective in discussions is almost like daring lightning to strike.

In between excursions to horizons outside the home, such subjects as food, clothing, health, and home furnishings will be considered. There will be two foot clinics but suspicious people might say that the desire for tireless feet is just another expression of the urge to wander away from homemaking duties. The subject of one talk, "Buying Men's Shirts," could be construed as an invasion of masculine rights.

A New York stilt, Mrs. Evelyn Tobey, will spend two hours informing campus visitors how to improve their personal appearance. That is also quite a change from the amount of time pioneer women accorded to such trifles. Salesmen will find a new vigor in women's buying technique after they have heard the talks about making every dollar buy a dollar's worth of goods.

Subjects Interesting

Ways of entertaining themselves and the children are also given a place on the program. Imagine such subjects as "Adventure with Music in the Home," a talk by Mrs. Lyman Jackson, Columbus, when there probably is not a spinning wheel in use in Ohio. "Hobbies for Boys and Girls" by Mrs. Arthur Weed, Baltimore, Maryland, surely will not include mention of the wood box or dishwashing.

Rural electrification, farm credit, and the organization of county health units are other subjects which did not appear on the first homemakers' program held at the University. This Farmers' Week will mark its 25th anniversary and there may have been some changes in ideas and conditions in that period.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Something fell right out of the sky into the Cliftona theatre yesterday, and proved to be Columbia's "Pennies from Heaven," which should get the palm as the year's most tuneful picture as well as one of the most amusing. It gives Bing Crosby a sprightly vehicle in which to go to town, and go to town he does, with some of the catchiest songs you have ever heard.

And Bing's acting talents are becoming more apparent with each film he makes. He is a born comedian; and he gets plenty of opportunity to show his wares in this picture, for it is literally filled with laugh-provoking situations and dialogue. Bing is nobly aided and abetted in his foolery by a royal cast that includes Madge Evans, Edith Fellows, Donald Meek, John Galloway and Louis Armstrong, colored king of swing music, and his band.

AT THE CIRCLE

By all odds the most hilarious, laugh-filled achievement of the career of America's dean of all comics is "Poppy." W. C. Fields film which opened yesterday at the Circle theatre.

The picture is the first to give Fields fans (i.e.: 99.44 per cent of the movie public) a really satisfying quantity of the master's tomfoolery at a sitting. Though the romance of Rochelle Hudson and Richard Cromwell is skillfully woven into a dominant position in the plot, "Poppy" is in pure

ALL THEY NEED IS BREAD

THE Third Reich has gone far in certain directions since the ascendancy of Chancellor Hitler. It has thrown into the discard the restrictions of Versailles, reoccupied the demilitarized areas along the Rhine, rehabilitated the military establishment and, what is most important, imbued the people with a new and ardent spirit of nationalism. There is no longer the post-war attitude of despondency and defeat.

War industries are booming in the Reich and it is the proud Nazi boast that unemployment has been reduced from 6,000,000 at the beginning of Chancellor Hitler's rule in 1933 almost to 1,000,000 today through the introduction of compulsory labor and military service.

All things go well in Germany, from the Nazi viewpoint, with one vital exception. The Germans are running low on bread, the staff of life. Ration cards have been issued and the individual consumption of bread is being held down to a minimum.

To provide bread for its people, the Nazi Government must have wheat and rye and these commodities can be obtained only from the outside of Germany. In order to make purchases abroad, Germany would be compelled to drain her gold supply, a prelude to economic disaster.

Chancellor Hitler has dealt effectively with most of his successive crisis but not with those involving economics. These he has deferred in the hope that a solution might suddenly appear like a bolt from the blue, an eventuality that seldom happens. Now the day of reckoning seems to be close at hand. Herr Hitler soon must determine just what he is going to hand his people when they ask for bread.

COMMUNIST VOTES AT $2.02 EACH

NERVOUS patriots and fearful members of the clergy have for some time been in a state of intense agitation over the menace of Communism. They have talked in a vein indicative of their belief that the shadow of Trotsky even now falls athwart this land of opportunity and that Stalin is prepared to march upon Washington. Any doubts that may have existed concerning the attitude of the American people toward the principles of Communism are quickly dispelled by a study of the election returns.

Out of 46,000,000 votes cast, Earl Browder, candidate for President on the Communist ticket, received only 80,000 and

WPA RESPONSIBILITY MYSTERY

WASHINGTON—The struggle over unemployment relief that will get under way soon after Congress convenes will be the most bitter one so far waged over the issue.

In the previous battles the chief points of controversy were two: (1) the amount of relief to be extended; (2) the form it was to take. Over the first question the opposing lines were clear-cut. The liberals demanded large grants; the conservatives, backed by business interests, clamored for minimum appropriations.

On the second point the line-up was less definite. Some of the liberals favored the work-relief method, others the public plan, while still others urged a combination of both. Among business men, some held for a "dole," others work-relief, and a minority, chiefly in the construction industry, advocated public works.

This is the program now in operation. It is headed for a severe raking when the President sends to Capitol Hill his $500,000,000 deficiency appropriation to carry the WPA through to June 30, 1937, the end of the current fiscal year.

THREE-SIDED ATTACK

The attack will be three-sided. One barrage will come from the conservative forces pressing vigorously for a tapering off of relief expenditures. Pointing to booming industrial activity, they contend that private business is absorbing large numbers of unemployed, and insist that the President make good his promise to balance the budget by cutting relief costs.

Militantly arrayed against these elements will be the liberals, labor, the drought bloc from the farm belt, plus the U. S. Conference of Mayors. This powerful coalition will batter both the opposition and the President with a double-barreled attack.

One drive will be aimed at forcing an increase in the $500,000,000 deficiency request of at least another $250,000,000. It is the contention of the coalition that if only a half-billion is appropriated there will have to be a one-third cut in relief rolls. Against this they are grimly opposed, both on social and economic grounds.

Industry, they concede, is flourishing and has provided a million or more new jobs. But they cite irrefutable figures to prove that only a small portion of these new workers have come from relief ranks. According to their figures the great bulk of the idle are still idle as far as private employment is concerned.

they represented an investment of $2.02 a vote. And it is not improbable that if the truth could be determined it would be found that by far the greater number of these votes were in protest against the personal abuse and violence to which Browder was subjected from the beginning of the campaign to the end and were not in support of his political principles.

How Posture Affects Overweight Middle-aged

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WE DISCUSSED yesterday a newly described symptom complex, which consists in a bad posture affecting those who become overweight in the abdominal region.

Dr. Clendingen

A normal posture in the standing position would allow of a line being drawn which would go through the ankle, the hip and the ear. These overweighted people are so built that they can hardly line up straight against a wall, and in their normal position an upright line drawn through the ankle, would go through the shoulder and far behind the back of the head.

This is due to the pendulous abdomen, full of fat, which pulls the body forward and makes the individual instinctively thrust his head forward and round his shoulders. The consequences of long continued assumption of this position are numerous and may be more or less serious. In the first place, the body is never properly aerated. Respiration under normal circumstances consists in the enlargement of the chest in all directions, partly accomplished by the muscles which are attached to the ribs, and partly by the diaphragm as it moves downward into the abdomen. Expiration consists in the narrowing of the chest in all directions, partly accomplished by the diaphragm rising from the abdomen into the chest, which is a passive action. The amount of air which flows in and out with each respiration is known as tidal air and averages about 500 c. c. or a pint, of air at each respiration for an adult.

If you take a normal breath and then breathe in the largest amount of air possible beyond that, you can take in about four more pints. This is called the complementary air. After you breathe out normally, it is possible for you to exhaust all the air in the lungs, which is also called the supplemental air.

Now in this postural middle-aged syndrome due to pendulous abdomen, the diaphragm is hindered in its action by the large amount of fat in the abdomen and the tidal air is reduced, as well as the capacity to introduce complementary and to expel supplemental air. This is largely because of the shortness of breath which these people suffer. In the course of time it is liable to lead to chronic lung change called emphysema, which is not easy to treat successfully.

The heart itself is not necessarily affected by this condition, although the general constitution may result in some heart failure as well as diabetes and Bright's disease. It is important to attempt to treat the condition before such crippling results have occurred, and a great deal can be done in this line, which will be discussed tomorrow.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendingen can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope, to Dr. Logan Clendingen, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are "Three Wonders Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

The BLOODHOUNDS Bay

By WALTER S. MASTERMAN

CHAPTER 34

"I HOPE you are not badly hurt, Mr. Reid?" Lady Severing said. "Colonel Graham tells me that you fell and injured your arm."

"Nothing to make a fuss about," Reid replied. "But this is a terrible business about Miss Lawrence and the children."

"I have been afraid of it ever since Sir Henry was murdered. Of course, there must be some connection, but who would have thought that Miss Lawrence, with her quiet manners, would have been a party to such a crime?"

"I don't believe for a moment she is," Reid said loyally.

"I wish I could think so, but how could she have been spirited away without shouting or making a struggle for it? And the children would have made an awful fuss, unless she had persuaded them to go willingly. It seems impossible to trust anyone nowadays."

"I am certain that you can trust Miss Lawrence," he said warmly. "As a matter of fact, she was only staying on here because she feared that some such attack might be made on the children."

To Reid's surprise, Lady Severing's manner changed. "You men are all the same—a pretty face and romance, and you are taken in at once. If it had been the housekeeper, Mrs. Thornton, you would have suspected her because she was ugly and had a vicious tongue, but this soft-looking miss with great eyes—I've no patience."

Reid remained silent. It did not take much intuition to guess that her outburst was due to her suspicions of Colindale, and her jealousy on account of his conduct.

It was best, he felt, to say no more, and Lady Severing had stopped speaking abruptly, as though ashamed at her sudden heat.

"James tells me that Mr. Selden will be here this afternoon," he said, closing his eyes.

"I am sorry," she said contritely. "You are ill, and ought not to be worried. Are you sure you would rather not come to the Abbey?"

"I shall be all right here—I'm used to roughing it. I hope to be up again in an hour or two."

James shook his head. "I'm afraid it will take longer than that," he said, and Reid seemed to detect a hidden meaning in the words.

Colonel Graham broke in. "Inspector Hutchins suggested that we ought to have a night watchman in the house, and is going to ask Hucks from the Bull Inn to undertake the duty. He's an ex-prize fighter, and will be a useful assistant for James."

"It will be a relief to me," Lady Severing added.

Reid found the strain of talking was telling on him. The pain was now a dull ache, throbbing and burning, and he was growing light-headed.

"I will send up what you want from the Abbey—James, perhaps you will see to that."

"I shall make it a personal responsibility," the butler said solemnly.

They went out, leaving him alone, and before long he was raving in delirium.

Selden's car drew up at the end of the bridge in the afternoon, and Hutchins came forward to greet him.

"Something fresh, I suppose?" the young detective asked cheerfully.

"I don't understand these modern methods," Hutchins grumbled. "I always understood that when a Yard man took up a case he stuck to it until he had either cleared it up or given it up."

"I haven't been idle, Hutchins," Selden grinned, "but we each have our own methods, and I thought you would have arrived at some conclusion."

"Things are a damned sight worse," he proceeded to tell of the latest developments with some considerable detail while Selden listened attentively.

"Colonel Graham and I have been all over the Abbey—I never saw such a rabbit warren in my life. You could hide a dozen people in it, and there are doors and passages everywhere—it's most confusing, and easy to lose your way at night when you can't get your bearings by seeing out of the windows."

They walked together over the bridge and into the court. The rain had ceased, but the pavement was wet, and water dripped depressingly from the eaves.

"I wonder they didn't grow grass here," Selden said inconsequently.

"I suppose it wouldn't grow with that yew tree," Hutchins replied indulgently.

"I suppose that must be it," he wheeled round on Hutchins. "What is your idea about this latest development?"

"I believe that butler James knows more than he will say—he's pretty deep; and I shouldn't be surprised if he and that girl, Miss Lawrence, weren't in it together."

"Come, Inspector, you don't think they were in collusion in the murder of Sir Henry Severing?"

"I don't know, I'm sure. It's a strange thing that he's been practically master of the house for years, and now he's been left all the money, I hear."

"Not quite all," Selden smiled, "but of course quite a sum. But, tell me, what did you propose to do before I came?"

"Colonel Graham suggested using his bloodhounds again. They were all right before, although they couldn't throw any light on the actual murder."

"It's worth thinking about," Selden said guardedly. "By the way, I hear that Reid has taken Colindale's place."

"A nice mess he's made—and mind you, Selden, I'm going to follow up the career of Master Reid. It seems a bit fishy to me the way he came down here and has established himself in the house."

Hutchins recounted what he knew, and what Graham had told him. Selden's secret amusement. "Where is Colonel Graham?" Selden asked. "Is he still here? I would like to have a word with him."

"He's gone to the village to see Hucks, the landlord of the 'Bull.' I suggested that Hucks should come here at nights. He's a tough customer and a bruiser, and it wouldn't be a bad thing if he acted as night watchman."

"I think that's a good suggestion," Selden agreed heartily. "It would be much better than employing a police officer."

"I don't see that I can do more here, then," Hutchins said. "I suppose you won't be running off again, now that this has happened?"

"I shall stay and see it through, Hutchins; but what steps have you taken?"

"I've ordered a thorough search to be made of the grounds and neighborhood, and we have issued a description of the missing girl and children. If they are anywhere near here we shall have them."

"Good! And this fellow Reid, is he here?"

"He's in bed at his cottage," Hutchins said grimly, "and likely to be for a bit. The doctor has seen him. I believe he's a bit light-headed. By the way, Selden, if I were you, I wouldn't let that butler, James, have much intercourse with Reid. I don't trust either of them."

"I'll have a talk with him," Selden said. "And Lady Severing—after all, she's mistress here, and we should consult her about things."

"Oh, she doesn't count," Hutchins said with contempt. "James is the virtual master of the house. But, of course, I saw her, as she had phoned for me."

"You got nothing out of her?" Selden asked. "She knows nothing. On the whole I think she's telling the truth."

"I'm just going to have a look round on my own," Selden said. "I shall see you later."

After the inspector's departure, Selden strolled round the house, now quite deserted except for the servants' quarters. The servants were badly scared and would not come out of their room unless with a direct order.

His inspection took some time, but there was a look of quiet satisfaction on his face when he returned to the gateway and, crossing the bridge, walked thoughtfully over to Reid's cottage.

He found the curtains drawn and the sick man impatiently tossing on the bed. He looked up as Selden came in.

"Feeling bad?"

"Thank the Lord you've come, Selden. I couldn't have stood much more of this. These bites hurt like the devil; the doctor insisted on cauterizing them again, and he's given me some injection or other. But it's not that that's worrying me."

"You are well enough to talk?"

"If I didn't I should get up right away, and to hell with the doctor. I have been waiting for you to roll up."

"Good, then we can discuss matters, for I'm none too easy in my mind. Our good friend Hutchins suspects everyone, including you and James, and is getting busy. But that's not the worst."

"What is it?" Reid said, half sitting up and dreading the next words.

"Colonel Graham has suggested using his bloodhounds." In the dim light Selden saw an expression of terror come to Reid's face.

As Singer's Fame Rises Her Voice Goes Higher

ROSE HAMPTON, opera, concert and radio singer, has been steadily rising up the steps to musical fame. And all this time her voice, oddly enough, has been rising higher and higher too.

Today this artist, after having been successively a contralto and mezzo soprano, has discovered that her real forte is that of a dramatic soprano. Miss Hampton recently returned from a European tour, where she sang dramatic soprano roles for the first time. Other singers, including Jean De Reszke, Lauritz Melchior and Lili Lehman, have risen in the same manner to allow them to essay new roles, and Miss Hampton bids fair to follow in this tradition. She has a range of two and one-half octaves, and that is a great range for any singer, no matter what her classification.

Rose Hampton is an American girl, born in Cleveland and brought up in Buffalo. She studied at the Curtis Institute of Music. Her first popular success was scored in the summer of 1929, as a member of the Chautauqua Opera association. Following this success she was selected to appear at the Worcester Festival in the autumn, and shortly thereafter was engaged as a leading singer for the Philadelphia Grand Opera company, with which she remained for three seasons.

Leopold Stokowski, conductor of the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra, hearing her in Philadelphia, engaged her to appear in concert with his orchestra. On the evening of her twenty-third birthday she made her Metropolitan debut as Laura in "La Gioconda". Since then Miss Hampton has been busy with concert, opera and radio activities.

She is a typical young American woman, likes jazz and dancing, riding, swimming and tennis. But she is first of all a musical artist.

Afghan of Crochet is Warm and Gay

A Battalion of Butterflies—their wings spread to keep you warm, make this crocheted afghan a thing of unusual beauty. What more conducive to "forty winks" than a warm coverlet, crocheted of diamond-shaped medallions, 7-1/2x11 inches. Each butterfly is different by reason of vari-colored odds and ends of wool. You'll find this the most glorious sort of pick-up work, just simple crochet and chain stitch, with the butterfly's body in puff stitch. In pattern 5716 you will find directions for making the afghan; an illustration of it and of the stitches used; material requirements; color suggestions.

RIFFITH, BIG 10 CHIEF, FROWNS ON PROBE OF FOOTBALL SUBSIDIZING

Braucher Parlays Pittsburgh, Louisiana State Duquesne, T.C.U., Auburn in New Year's Games

By BILL BRAUCHER

Central Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Dec. 28 — Just as the great gesture of defiance to the game of football that made the business, here are the selections for the Bowl games on New Year's day:

ROSE BOWL — University of Pittsburgh to beat University of Washington.

SUGAR BOWL — Louisiana

State to win a close one from Santa Clara.

ORANGE BOWL — Duquesne to beat Mississippi State.

COTTON BOWL — Sammy

Baugh to outpitch Buzz Bulvid, giving Texas Christian a victory over Marquette.

BACARDI BOWL — Auburn to outdo Villanova by a point or a touchdown, or if you prefer, the game to end in a tie.

EAST-WEST—Larry Kelley is right end on the East team, so how can it lose?

It's Wonderful!

How's that for going out on a limb, a half dozen limbs, a whole tree in fact: How's that for a gambler's parlay:

Giving you a few reasons for each choice (though football teams never give forecasters any reason for upsets), here's what will happen:

Pitt will be operating at Pasadena with a distinct psychological advantage, having been to the Rose Bowl three times without winning any marbles. Washington has been there twice, losing a game to Alabama in 1927 and managing to gain a tie with Navy in 1924. Pitt is one and a half up as far as incentive to wipe out disgrace is concerned. Pitt is deadly serious this year, with all kinds of the old college spirit, in sharp contrast with other appearances when the game was taken by the players in a spirit of good clean fun.

Pitt seems to me a superior ground team, with a hard and fast attack, two complete backfields and a grand defensive line. The Huskies have an edge in the air, perhaps, but I like a ground team because when that ball gets into the ozone you never know who's going to reach up and grab it and run 100 yards for himself and dear old Alma Mater.

I can't see Washington, a team that was scored on by Idaho, that beat Oregon by a single touchdown and was tied by Stanford, beating a team like Pitt, conqueror of Notre Dame and Nebraska. I saw Pitt slaughter a pretty good Notre Dame team, and Nebraska was a great ball club this year.

Now for the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans. Santa Clara lost only one game all season, to Texas Christian and beat three strong foes in St. Mary's, Stanford and Auburn, but I rate Louisiana right up there with Minnesota as one of the toughest teams in the country, on the ground, in the air, or where-ever you want to play. It is true Louisiana was tied by Texas early in the season, but the team was handicapped at that time by injuries and hadn't gotten under way. Rice, Georgia, Arkansas, Vanderbilt, Mississippi State, Auburn and Tulane were all good ball clubs, but the Tigers tore 'em apart.

As for the Orange Bowl in Miami, I'd say Mississippi State is being given a large lemon to suck on. When Duquesne points for a game, as it pointed for Pitt and Marquette, the enemy just hasn't got a chance.

The Cotton Bowl game, in Dallas, intrigues me. Two All-Americans will be flinging leather, Baugh for Texas Christian and Bulvid for Marquette. It ought to be a wild and woolly affair. It's Sammy Baugh's backyard, and I think the Christians will be wilder than the Catholics, though Marquette was pretty wild when Duquesne popped them over. Sammy Baugh will have the old control, though, and may break Dizzy Dean's National league strikeout record.

About This and That In Many Sports

Wilson and Barber

At least two of the big football games New Year's Day will be well-handled over the microphone—Don Wilson, who has officiated at the Rose Bowl game several years, will be back again, while Red Barber, who has rapidly come to the front as one of the finest, will work the Auburn-Villanova fray in Havana, Cuba—WLV will carry the Havana game at 1:15 p. m., coming on later with the Rose Bowl fray. The Pitt-Washington game comes at 4:45, and WGN airs the East-West contest 30 minutes earlier.

Williamsport Wins

Williamsport's boys turned in a good game Wednesday evening in winning 24-23 from Frankfort on the Ross county floor—The Deercreek guards, Corcoran and Straley, and center, Reeb, did all the scoring with exception of one point, the Frankfort guards holding the Williamsport forwards well in hand—Corcoran was high with 11 counters.

BLOOMFIELD FOX DRIVE SUCCESS; THREE CAUGHT

Three foxes captured in the huge drive in the South Bloomfield district Saturday netted $140 for the Methodist church of South Bloomfield and the Helping Hand society of the church.

The results of the drive surpassed all expectations of those in charge. The crowd at the roundup was estimated up to 4,000 persons. Over 900 were fed at the Helping Hand hall after the drive. Ladies of the society had more food than needed. Surplus food was auctioned.

All foxes in the ring were killed, but drivers reported several others escaped through the lines previous to the roundup.

Members of the committee in charge of the drive asked The Herald to thank all persons who participated in the event, the sheriff's department and the state highway patrol for their assistance in directing traffic.

Residents of several other Pickaway county townships are making plans for drives in the near future.

Gillman to Wesleyan

Sid Gillman, former Ohio State captain, who now coaches the line at Denison university, is being touted for a similar job at Ohio Wesleyan, where a good line coach is needed, and sadly—Babe Frump, line coach at Delaware for the last two years, has resigned to return to Clinton, Ind., high school—Fritz Mackey, freshman coach at Ohio State is another ex-Wesleyan line teacher.

Lambert Has Record

Ward (Piggy) Lambert, whose Purdue basketball team has already defeated two Ohio quintets this season, has won four Western conference titles and tied for five others in his 17 years with the Bollermakers—His teams have never finished lower than fifth in the Big Ten since 1920.

C. A. C. EXPECTS BIG CROWD AT TUESDAY SHOW

A large crowd is expected Tuesday evening for the Circleville Athletic club's wrestling and boxing show. It starts at 8:15 in the club gymnasium.

Stacy Hall, of Columbus, and Bob Blake, of Toledo, two of Ohio's best middleweights, will tangle in the main event in a two-out-of-three fall, 90-minute limit contest.

Pete Sherman, 168-pounder from Kansas City, will vie with John Anderson, of St. Louis.

Hugo Eckener and Jim Wyman, two behemoths of the mat, will meet in the other grunt bout.

Local boys will feature the boxing card with Shirley Hulse and Jimmy Arledge meeting in a 4-rounder, and Jimmy Selmer and Jimmy Emerine meeting. Selmer won last week.

STATE CAGERS TANGLE WITH 'NAME' QUINTS

COLUMBUS, Dec. 28.—(UP)—With their early season bids for national attention given jolting setbacks, Ohio basketball teams today rallied their forces after a holiday lull and prepared for another assault upon "name" schools.

The concentrated "firing" on major quintets this week will mark the final "warm up" efforts of Buckeye and Ohio conference teams before they launch their own championship campaigns.

To date nine of the state's quintets have faced major court combines in a total of 18 contests. Only two triumphs were garnered as compared with 16 defeats.

The early campaign saw John Carroll defeated by Duquesne; Toledo turned back by Purdue and the Western State Teachers; Cincinnati beaten by Indiana U. and Indiana Central Normal; Dayton trimmed by Detroit; Miami trounced by Indiana; Xavier down by Kentucky and Purdue; Youngstown dropped by Westminster; Ohio State beaten by California and Nebraska and Marshall of the Buckeye bested by George Washington, Long Island U. City College of New York and St. Thomas.

Marshall and Ohio State grabbed the only two major victories thus far. Marshall beat Western Maryland and Ohio State triumphed over Creighton.

In dairy tests in New York State it was found that when hot milk passes through metal equipment, the milk has a tendency to develop an "oxidized" or "cooked" flavor when stored later in the refrigerator.

RAIN HINDERS TEAMS WORKING FOR BOWL GAMES

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 28.—(UP)—California experienced some unusual weather today that threatened to interfere with practice sessions of Washington and Pittsburgh football teams, being readied now for their New Year's day Rose Bowl meeting.

Coach Jim Phelan brought his Washington Huskies into Pasadena last night for the final phase of their training and ran into one of the worst rain storms the coast has had. The weather was in decided contrast to high temperatures through which the squad had drilled all week at Santa Barbara.

Phelan said today's practice session might be washed out. Inland at Arrowhead Springs, 50 miles from the coast, Jock Sutherland and his Pitt Panthers got a taste of weather reminiscent of the Alleghenies.

Poems That Live

A KISS

Rose kissed me today.
Will she kiss me tomorrow?
Let it be as it may.
Rose kissed me today.
But the pleasure gives way
To a savor of sorrow;
Rose kissed me today.
Will she kiss me tomorrow?
—Austin Dobson.

THE SOVEREIGNS

They who create rob death of half its sting;
Their life is given for the Muse's sake;
Of thought they build their palaces, and make
Enduring entities and beautiful things;
They are the Poets—they give airy wings
To shapes marmorean; or they overlook
The ideal with the brush, or, soaring, wake
Far in the rolling clouds their glorious strings.
The Poet is the only potentate;
His scepter reaches o'er remotest zones;
His thought remembered and his golden tones
Shell, in the ears of nations uncreate,
Roll on for ages and reverberate
When Kings are dust beside forgotten thrones.
—Lloyd Mifflin.

AN EPITAPH

A lovely young lady I mourn in my rhymes;
She was pleasant, good-natured, and civil sometimes.
Her figure was good; she had very fine eyes,
And her talk was a mixture of foolish and wise,
Her adores were many, and one of them said,
"She waited rather well! It's a pity she's dead!"
—George John Cayley.

QUESTIONABLE BIDDING

MISS MARY JORDAN, St. Louis, asks two pertinent questions: "Was West's bid of 5-Diamonds, over South's opening call of 2-Spades, the wisest bid which could have been made? After South had ventured to bid a small slam, should West have bid a grand slam? North and South were not vulnerable, but East and West were vulnerable."

It is a rather wise old saying that it does not pay to jump a bid over an opening call, but that is not always true, of course. As South had opened with 2-Spades, he evidently had no intention of quitting had West bid only 3-Diamonds. Had West bid up no faster than required might have happened bidding at 4-Spades or he might have doubled West's 6-Diamonds. I much doubt whether South would have bid a small slam unaided, had not West showed the character of his hand so plainly by his immediate game call.

South fulfilled his small slam with ease, by discarding heart losers on dummy's established clubs. West could have entered dummy twice by means of diamond leads, to lead hearts through South. If South played his Ace on the first lead of hearts, West could have made his 6-Diamonds readily, by having dummy ruff one low heart. In case South refused to play his Ace of hearts, either on the first or second lead of that suit from dummy, West must have gone down by having to lose two heart tricks.

Going down even two tricks doubled, vulnerable, would have cost only 500 points, less 150 honors in a rubber game, or a net of 350 points. That would have been a big saving for West, over allowing South to make his small slam undoubled. That scored South 780 points total, aside from giving his side a game. As West ventured to bid a small slam unaided, I think that he might have risked bidding the grand slam also.

Many players have commented upon the increasing stress placed by the American Bridge League, upon the so-called Masters Points awarded winners of its tournament events. Few who have noted, see any reason for a shift from trophies, that may be shown and exhibited, to barren honors, that nobody but the winner remembers over night. A citation seems a poor substitute for something that every normal player treasures. The change seems like poor economy.

safe at home a few blocks up the street.

The Mattsons and the Weyerhaeusers are neighbors in the exclusive residential neighborhood where fine houses sit atop the hills overlooking Puget sound. Dr. Mattson, wealthy dentist, reputedly expended $65,000 in building his house. His son and the Weyerhaeuser boy are playmates.

The Weyerhaeuser kidnaping and ransom, which set in motion the northwest's greatest manhunt, ended with prison sentences for the three abductors, but not until a $200,000 ransom had been paid.

With that cash fresh in mind police checked back over its history for every possible clue and hint that might aid them in solving the Mattson abduction. They guarded against making the costly mistakes that allegedly slowed the hunt in the other case, and checked over the hideouts they investigated in that hunt.

Mahan, Waleys Caught
William Mahan, Harmon Waley and his wife, Margaret Waley, were the trio that snatched young Weyerhaeuser, jammed him into the rambler seat of a car, and dodged about the northwest with him until the ransom was collected.

The rough country around Tacoma affords hundreds of places in which the kidnaper could hole up and escape detection. However, it was believed that officers expected their best chance for a quick solution in the case lay in trapping the man through some clue he may have left on the ransom note or through his subsequent efforts to contact the Mattsons and arrange for payment of the ransom.

The Mattson house was locked and guarded early today. Only one light was burning in all the house that could be seen from the street. Police refused to let anyone approach the door. The telephone was not answered.

Across the street and down toward Commencement bay, police beat through the brush for some sign that would show whether the kidnaper headed for the sound. They found nothing. The car which William and Marjorie saw for the moment before it roared away into the night, but which they could not describe, was not located.

The children told police that despite the black mask they could see the man was dark skinned and that he wore a beard.

Fear the abductor might be a drug addict was expressed when it was recalled that Dr. Mattson's medicine kit was rifled a week ago, presumably by someone seeking drugs.

The ransom note was a crudely printed message, according to a society editor friend of the family and the only person other than police executives to whom it was shown. He said the note apparent-

EVELAND LINKS COUPLE IN GAS STATION RITES

Oil barrels and auto accessories usually associated with a filling station formed an altar Saturday afternoon for the marriage of Edward Jaynes, roofer, of 34 E. Hayes street, Delaware, and Miss Marjorie Clark, Columbus.

Their marriage was performed about 2 p. m. in a filling station on W. Main street by H. O. Eveland, justice of peace. Allen Thornton and Paul Helwigen were witnesses.

The couple had been unable to locate Eveland, and had stopped at the filling station to inquire about him. Eveland was located at his home and went to the filling station for the wedding.

SOCIETY FORMS TO PARE LIVING COSTS FOR TWO

EUGENE, Ore. (UP)—Those who believe, as does Howard Kessler, in the old bromide, "Two can live as cheaply as one," can find support on the University of Oregon campus.

Just to prove it, the recently married student from Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada, has formed the first chapter of the Two Can Live as Cheaply Association—a co-operative organization which he foresees in nationwide proportions.

Designed to help the university's 127 married students, the club has these objectives:

1. Arrangements of socials, parties and dances for couples who could not escape Cupid.

2. Cooperative purchasing of all commodities at reduced prices.

3. Study of individual problems of young married couples and the exchange of such findings for mutual benefit at regular meetings.

Entering into the new venture with enthusiasm, Kessler and his associates found their most pressing problem at organization time was a less cumbersome name for the group.

ly was made by a rubber printing set similar to those used as playthings by children. The ransom demand was $28,000. Other reports put the cash demand at $16,000 and $18,000.

MANY PLANES LAUNCH SEARCH OVER WIDE AREA

Rancher Reports Blinding Flash Might Have Been Big Boeing Liner

over Ventura. Officials of the company at Burbank, however, said it would be checked closely.

A thorough search of the country north of here along the coast and east to the Mojave desert flats was started at dawn. The United sent 25 radio equipped planes to cover the area while ground crews worked from the highways in cars.

Pilot Veteran

A triangle fored by Los Angeles, Ventura and the Mojave desert enclosed the area in which pilots believed the plane is down. Many believed the desert the best bet. Blom, experienced in coast flying probably would have headed for that area if he had trouble getting down at Burbank, where a storm was whipping across the field.

North to Ventura, the regular route, the terrain is rough and aside from emergency fields; offers few spots in which the big twin-motored plane could be landed with safety.

The passengers were Everett T. Ford, son of the president of the Grace Line, and his wife; Mrs. A. W. Newton, M. P. Hare, A. L. Markwell, John Korn, A. Noak, Miss E. Valence and H. S. Teague.

The crew comprised Blom, copilot Robert McLean, and Stewardess Yvon Trego.

ASHVILLE SCHOOL NEWS

The pupils of the upper four grades gave a very interesting program of Christmas music before the local P. T. A. last week. They were directed by Miss Plum and given breathing spells by Mary Elizabeth Millar, John Peters and Mrs. Hoelzer who added very much to the program with their solos, Rev. H. Fudge had the devotional part of the program.

Most all of the grades met their quota for the Christmas seal sales but none went beyond it except the juniors who just doubled it. This means they sold as many as any other two classes combined.

Grades one to four will put on a combined Christmas program on Thursday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. The other grades will have their own individual programs the same afternoon. All the rooms have trees with the proper decorations for the season and the children can hardly wait for Thursday to come.

Hewitt Cromley, class of '36 and Charles Higley, class of '33, both students at O. S. U. are spending their Christmas vacation in Florida as is Roberta Cromley, Hewitt's sister and a junior in A. H. S. Both these boys did very well in stock judging at Ohio State last week as one took fourth place and one nineteenth in a group of 183 contestants.

All Ashville teachers are planning to attend the sessions of the Ohio State Teachers Association to be held in Columbus next Monday and Tuesday.

The Ashville high school cage teams treated the Williamsport teams rather roughly, taking all three games last Friday night.

The second team game was a thriller, the Ashville boys being forced to come from behind in the last quarter and winning by a close margin, 13-11.
